A SHOCKING DEATH.—We have received the particulars of a terrible accident, resulting in death, which occurred in the Township of Brant ford, on Tuesday last. Mr. Bradley, the proprietor of the Ancaster Saw Mills, while at work was caught in the breast by a circular saw and instantly cut through the body. His liver was forn out and thrown some twenty feet across the mill. A most extraordinary circumstance connected with this frightful event is related by parties in whose word we have implicit confidence, and was witnessed by a large number of the unfortunate man's neighbore who were present at the time, and who have been in the babit of congregating in the mill to witness the operaof congregating in the mili to witness the opera-tions of the saw. What the Gazette says about the superior facilities possessed by Chicago for resciving grain are correct, and in this respect, and this only has Chicago had the advantage of Milwaukee as a grain market heretofore; but we shall soon be on a forting with her on this score, besides having the advantage of her in everyother respect, and being destined by nature, as the Gazette very truly says, to be the commercial emporium of the North-west.

BODY FOUND IN THE LAKE .- On Tuesday evening, the body of a man drifted on shore near the foot of Mason street, and was taken charge of by the authorities and properly intered,-The body had evidently been in the water for a considerable length of time, being in the last stages of decomposition. On a musin handkerchief found in his pocket, was the name "O. A. BARROW," worked with green silk thread. A round brass snuff box was also found in one of his pockets, together with a two bladed pocket knife. No marks of violence could be found on the body, which was supposed to be that of a sailor, and it was deemed unnecessary to hold an inquest upon it.

CHOICE WHEAT,—Messrs. Coe Brothers sold yesterday 350 bags Choice Club Wheat at 76c, the highest price yet realized on the market.—It was a spleadid lot, consigned by D. M. Hosmer, Ripon. Mr. Hosmer sends to market some of the best samples of wheat that are received.—

The Administration War Against Douglas.

The Lecomptonites are getting up more hos tile demonstrations than ever against Douglas, since his Chicago speech. The Washington Union of Thursday, fires a whole broadside at the Illinois Senator, its editorial columns, and a long New York letter being chiefly devoted to that subject. The editor, after denouncing the attempts of Douglas "to derange and oppose" the party which "has sought to bestow upon nial, therefore, amounts to nothing. him its highest honors"-very explicitly says:

"If he prefers to oppose the Democracy, to oppose the Republicans, or to set up for himself and attempt to carve out of the publicanew organization, placing himself at its head, we shall treat him as an enemy, and we shall freely express the conviction that he has forfeited the onfidence of his former associates. Mr. Douglas wilt find it as difficult, we apprehend, to raise up an effective Douglas party, as Joe Smith and Brigham Young have been in building into form a special religious organization, &c.

The Union.

The Union's New York correspondence con-

In the estimation of those who have a right to consider themselves astional Democrats—who hold the same opinion as ninety-tipe hundredths ot the remocracy of the Union—and who have supported, and do support, the President and his Administration, Mr. Douglas' speech on Friday last, at Chicago, seems to be quite as offensive, as objectionable, and reprehensible as any speech which he has delivered since he first assumed an attitude of hostility to the policy of the Administration, the ninth of December last. of the Democracy of the Unio

This same correspondent charges that Mr. DocuLAS, in taking this stend, has violated the promises made by him to Democrats la New York, and adds:

They believed traine self unnappy and als-contented at the anomalous situation in which he was placed. Excluded for months past from the councils of his democratic colleagues in the Son-ate, with no, even nominally, democrat follow-ing in either house of Congress, regarded as a foe by the Administration, and looked on with distrust by the masses of the democratic party, unitude by the masses of the democratic party, it was natural to suppose that his as uranees of future fidelity to the party and resolution to suffer the past to be forgotten, were made in order to enliet the sympathies of those to whem they were made to aid him in his re-encollment in the ranks of the national defended by the convention which met a: Hurrisburgh, and nominated John M. Both these organs deny the right of private judgment and insist that every Democrat shall shut his eyes and swallow the does prescribed for him by the party Quacket, without wincing. But the amusing part of the matter is that what the Union stignatizes as without wincing. But the amusing part of the matter is that what the Union stignatizes as the state is that what the Union stignatizes as a candidate for Judge of thousands of the energytic, enterprising son released by our labels and distinguished Senator in Congrese, the hundred by the Atlantic states. SHENCE. From a voinme, just published in London, of very plea-ing pacter, excitled "The Rivulet: a Contribution to S and Bong," by Thomas Lynch, by Thomas synon, it is a re-wrought-identy builded, thought on thought. Truth's temple greets the sky; and like a clead; with towers, the soul, with her subset that provers, Is strengthened silently.

east me out of the carriage; crawling down the steps like a serpent. I was left with Velvet "Madame has had a weary journey," I said, ourning with curiosity to learn something of the mystery.

"It is only the beginning, monsiour," she said.

"Au adventure, indeed! Would you suppose that I am flying from my husband; from a cruel, persecuting monster "

I was a Briton, and had Britons' old fashioned notions about such things. "I'm, indeed!" I was asping, drawing myself up sadly enough. "Ah!" continued Velvet Hood, reading me with a French wowan's quickness, "I know what you think of it. But, it you could learn what a wratch he is. Sir, he beats ne with his long riding whip, if I do so much as lonk from a window. See!" and with a strange confidence, she let down the Velvet Hood, and showed the back of her neck and shoulders; where there was a long, raw welt, quite red and angry.

"H'm?" I said, "highly improper freatment, no doubt." I was still the dry Briton; but was growing more mystified every instant.

The old cringing way was on him again in an HENRIPES, JR., Brusslit water.

The old cringing way was on him again in an instant.

"Sir, there is no offence to you whatever. I had forgotten myself but for an instant. Accept my humblest excuses." Then, under his teeth, "Ah, Scelerate! I could whip you worse than ever did that husband of yours."

I turned from him with contempt. Wonderfui mystery! How sho could tolerate this other mean-souled spaniel of a Neapolltan! But there she sat, quite composed and smiling, even, with the velvet hold thrown back, "Take Chinese Vermille Loon for the contempt of the selection of the s

"Courage," and Velvet-Hood. "Hark! there is the bell! One more halting-place, and we are sale."

As she spoke we began to move slowly, and the express shot forth again into the darkness.—
The great sea shells were held to our ears again, and we once more sottled ourselves back in our places, against a long spell of joanneying. I had taken in a fresh store of that sea-green aliment, just as engine had been taking in a store of coke and water; but, though there was a second Edouard and Marie whose history seemed deeply interesting, still, with eyes tolerably bleared and drowsy brain, it was not possible to do much in that way. Those who sat opposite seemed to have been wearied out of their troubles. The Velvet Hood eleeping tranquilly, but the Neopolitan still kept watch—shooting his eyes from right to left, ceaselossly. So the Marseilles express wont forward through the night, and gray morning, too. Until, grown drowsy myself, the sea-green romance slipped away down to the bottom of the carriage.

No more consciousness until a loud, despairing engine shriek, prolonged infinitely, roused me up. The Nespolitan had his hands clakped and was calling our piteously: "O Mercy! Morcy! Signors! O, gentle signors, listen to me!—Spare, spare—sh, 'tis cold. Where are we?—Wake, Wake!

He jestled his companion as he spoke. She roused up in a moment, and turned to him with that strange sweetness of hers.

"Are you refreshed, Carlo?" she said, put-that strange eweetness of hers.

"Are you refreshed, Carlo?" she said, put-ting back the velvet hood and smoothing her hair.

"Tell me what hour it is," he said.

She consulted a little jewelled watch hanging at her waist. "Half-past four," she said, with a smile. "How the hours have run on!"

So they had. There was a cold, blueish atmosphere shroad, and the three night travellers were shivering miserably with the cold of that early morning. Some stray men in blonzes were going to their work; but they had not been up all night.

going to their work; but they had not been up all night.

The train was slackening its speed; it was drawing near that other balting place. More platform, more range of offices, gilding by in the cold, blueish light. There are some early morning travellers closely muffled up, but very fresh and buoyant, standing, ready, and waiting for the express. Very different from the bleared, baggard souls that were pouring out upon the platform.

But a short span for stoppeds here, basely

But a short span for stoppage here; barely ave minutes. No stir from my two companions.

"Mondieu! why do they not go forward? I tremble with the cold. Feel me. O, I am very miserable, heart and body?"

"Wrap this about you," Velvet Hood said, taking her chawl from her choulders and putting it round him. "There!"

He looked at her analite.

He looked at her suchly,
"How quiet you take all this!" he said.—
"Have you any perves, or loeling?"
She laughed pleasantly.
"Should you ask that, after——"
"Poul"—don't!" he eaid, covering up his face.
"O, I could dry now—dry my eyes and heart out!
Why don't they go forward!"

All this while, the Neapolitan has been turning with and red, bit stock that their graduations.

"Bacre!" exclaims one of the gentlemen near the eteps, "are they coming down?"
"Now, mon ami," Velvet Hood said, rising and passing him, "be reasonable. Let us go, it they require us so particularly. Adieu, Mon-teun," he said sweetly turning to me. Then she draw the velvet hood close over her face.—
The N-apolitan had to be well nigh dragged from the carriage. the carriage.

marked. He hid curiously enough, taken up his handy vallee, and was preparing to go too. "A veteran genuleman was murdered last night in Paris, by his wife, (a grisette he had married off the pare) and his courior. Suspicion—telegraph—nothing more. I, is very simple. This lady and gentleman who have just let us are singularly like the description. Good morning sirgod voyage, sir!"

With that he bowed himself down the steps; a chrill shrick from the engins, impatient to go forward. Well it might, now that what it waited for was accomplished.

"Do so, in Heaven's name." And he stole

"It is only the beginning, monsieur," she said. Than rising, she came over and placed herself exactly fronting me. She stooped forward to speak, and I saw into the velvet heod. A round, pale face, with eaff on hair; with a composed, gentle expression, in keeping with the voice.

"What do you make of all this?" she said camestly. "Speak quickly."

What could I make. I would confess to Madame that it embarrassed me not a little. It bore the look of an adventure.

"Au adventure, indeed! Would you suppose that I are flying from my husband: from a could.

At this moment the door was softly opened, and one of the brisk, muffled travellers stepped in. He bad a little handy valles, which he put on the seat beside him, and a song comforter about his neck. "Fine fresh morning it was," he said, so he loosed his comforter; "good to the counter."

he said, as he loosed his commerce, even the country."

"What is this delay?" the Neapolitan said, grainly. "Why do we not go forward?"

"They were getting up the passports," the brisk man believed, "No, it could not be that either. Ah! here they are."

The door opened again. Three gentlemen in block standing near the stops—ene ascends them with a paper in his hand.

"All here have come down from Paris?" he says, interrogatively.

"Tea," I narwer, being next the door, "except this gentlemen."

"Pardon, Messieura," the lady remarks, quite composed. "We only got in at the last hatting white and red, his teeth chattering galvanically.
"Don't trouble yourselves," he says faintly,
"It is no matter about ins baggage, we can leave it—we do not care."

"By no means," Volvet Hood says sweetly,
"We could not afford that, Meseleurs. What is to become of my poor toilette; which is sufficiently disarranged already. Rather let us de-"No! no!" the Neapolitan cried, clinging to the arms of the seat with both hands. "Leave

"Sir," she continued, "that was this morning's work, See again;" and she had stripped her arm in an instant, "That is his bite! Ab! the cavage! And he is a marquis of the purest blood in France. Was I to stay—to stay to be lashed and bitten?"

"H'm certainly not. That is—
"That is—this is, of course. Fortunately, there was this node Neapolitan gentleman to stand botween me and this vile oppression—this woman beating!"

"Yes," she went on. "There we will stay until this wife-beating monster dies. Dieu meroi! he is near to seventy."

"That is the arrangement?" I said.

"That is the arrangement? Carlo is fearful of pursuit; but there is no danger. There is my brother, too, another savage—a builty—"

"Most curious history," I said.

"Most curious history," I said.

"Here the Nespolitan appeared at the door, glouing at us both. Velvet Hood was back in her place in an instant.

Worl-Unchanged. THE CROSS IN WASHINGTON COUNTY.-We CONVERSE with a gentleman yesterday, who has just returned from a week's visit to Washington County, and from all the information that he had obtained respecting the wheat crop he was of the opinion that scereely an average yield could be expected from that county. In many localities great lojury had been sustained by blight and rust, and in others no injury was done whatever. Other crops generally looked well and promised an abundant yield.

THE Chors IN DODGE COUNTY .- The Pox Lake Gazette of the 90th, is informed by several farmers thereabouts that the wheat crop promises well, although in some please heads are found to be blighted. This is found in picoss sown carly. Some are complaining of their wheat rusting, but not to any extent. Barley in that region is a simost total failure. The corn crop is giving every premise of a yich yield. Postones are dying out in some places, and the Gasetto thinks it masses to make an estimate of what they will be.

Caors in Warricoa County.—We are sorry to say, from the best information that we can obtain, that the winter whas in this county is seriously affected wish the rust. Of spring wheat there will be but a moderate yield, in consequence of the labe long continued wet weather. Outs and barley too are considerably injured from the same casses. Corn and postoces will yield largely.—Wompacous Register, 1823.
